

Connie Barr

WOMEN WHO TRAVEL ALONE

Original title: Kvinner som reiser alene
 Publisher: Megafon forlag, 2024
 Category: Fiction
 Pages: 350

This debut went straight into the Norwegian best seller list when published this summer! This is a novel about the longing for love and the escape from it, about the choices that change everything, about how to live with them – and about realizing that life is an equation that doesn't add up.

Sanna is in the midst of a life crisis. Her marriage is half-dead, and a new colleague stirs dangerous emotions. Fearing what she might do if she stays, she flees from her husband, children, and job.

But under the Mediterranean sun, nothing gets easier. Far from home, Sanna discovers hidden aspects of herself, and her morals are seriously tested.

Through dramatic events, she meets Evelyn, an older woman with a suitcase holding a tragic love story. Despite their differences, the two women form a bond that will change them both.

Connie Barr has given us a wonderful and thought-provoking story that readers from many generations will benefit from and enjoy (...). She describes with a light and elegant touch why the two women come to realize that choices must be made and how they decide which path to take (...). All of this Barr presents to us in an elegant manner, and she manages to weave it all together in an impressive way.

Nettavisen

Connie Barr

Connie Barr is a journalist, author, and award-winning documentary filmmaker. She has extensive experience as a host for various news and current affairs programs and has been the editor for one of the country's most popular entertainment shows for many years ("Hver Gang Vi Møtes"). She has won the Gullruten award for Best Factual and Current Affairs Program and also been nominated several times.

